From The Perspective of The Mod Team

An explanation of the events regarding the unbanning of CoolFlamez from the Blox Cards discord.

Opening Statement

On March 11th, 12:45PM (EST), Discord user CoolFlamez#7736 (194753018099531778) was unbanned from and came back to the Blox Cards discord. This is an explanation as to why he was unbanned, what led to his unban, and why he has yet to be banned once more, from the perspective of the current team of moderators in Blox Cards. The majority of this will be explained with images, to mitigate misinterpretation, and explain our interpretation.

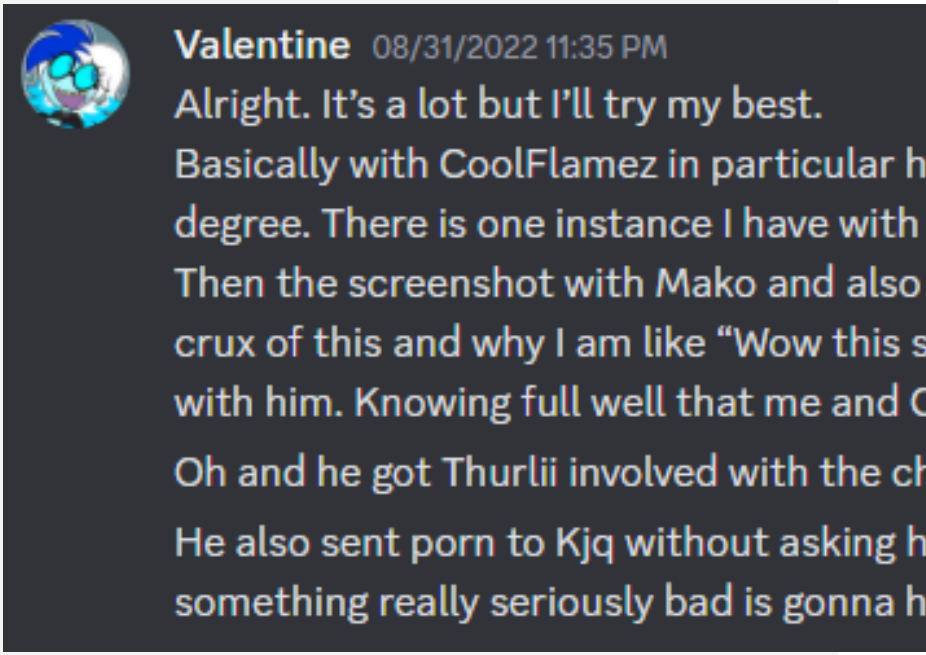
Content warning: This document covers topics of roleplay, erotic pornography, cheating, and harassment. Please read with discretion.*

The First Ban

2-Week Temp

08-31-22

On August 31st, 2022, user Leaficarus was sent a formal complaint about Flamez in request to ban him, due to the behaviors listed below. He was accused of attempting to engage in sexual DMs with other users, sending unsolicited inappropriate images and forcing his fetishes onto other users.



09-01-22

This was later brought to the attention of the moderators, and after a discussion of all the evidence presented at the time, it was agreed upon that he should be banned for 2 weeks, under threat of a permanent ban should any post-ban evidence surface that shows he's continued to engage in this behavior.

Escalation to Permanence

The following day, it was brought into question why the ban was only for two weeks, by EndlessCactuar (CsseldnE#1862 / 975306350605242399). He claims he was groomed by Flamez and taken advantage of emotionally.

It is at this point where mods start to uncover the DMs between Flamez and Endless, which has remained the core of this entire situation. The DMs in question will be referenced multiple times within this document, as their interpretation will decide the stance taken by the reader.

These are the DMs received from Endless, between him and Flamez, slightly censored. They will be revealed in full later, though originally it was agreed he could censor them so long as the context remained the same.

Post-Roleplay.

When asked about what specifically felt like grooming, the following images were sent. The common theme between them is that Flamez either sent or said something lewd first, unprompted, and therefore he felt like he was being groomed.

This is the only time Thurlii will be directly addressed within the document, although he may appear in later images. Thurlii either still is or at the time was, in an open relationship with Flamez. Stuff like this is normal to the both of them, and Thurlii's only involvement within the situation is that he held a threesome ERP session alongside Flamez and Endless.

The entirety of these DMs were sent to the mod team to review.

That being said, the night before, there was a discussion with CoolFlamez regarding the circumstances of his ban, in which he reveals Endless was the one who initially started this relationship.

Not only did Endless fully consent to porn in his DMs by directly requesting it, he's even asking to keep things within these DMs secret. Alongside that, and the obvious consent from these interactions, he fully reciprocates the energy Flamez is putting out in the above images. This isn't how grooming works, and will be brought up in the following discussion about Endless' claims of such acts.

Ultimately, Endless gets banned with this as the ban message:

”Grooming is a very serious offense, I cannot understate just how severe both grooming and related accusations are for cases like this.
That being said, after reviewing everything you've sent with us alongside the incident as a whole, we feel like this is far too misleading for any of us to be okay with.
*Not only did you admit to initiating ERP with Flamez on the 25th, but in every instance thereafter where you were approached by him, you reciprocated. There were no signs or indications that you were uncomfortable with the situation you had put yourself in. This isn't grooming in the slightest, as you had already established yourself as horny and in need of an outlet. It makes perfect sense for Flamez to want to continue doing stuff like that with you, as you've shown your own desire to do the same with comments like this. It also doesn't seem like he was taking advantage of you in the first images you sent. He asked to video call, you agreed to it and did [Whatever the fuck it is you did] with him. If you weren't comfortable with it you should have made that clear; you've proven in some of these images that you're clearly capable of saying no, but here you've chosen not to. This isn't how someone would act if they weren't comfortable with this.
All this is to say that we find that your accusation of his "grooming" to be malicious and downright dishonest. The way we see it, you fucked up by getting intimate with Flamez, and in an attempt to save your own image you're playing victim to Flamez' horniness, which just isn't true when you're both clearly consenting. Due to your false accusations and attempting to mislead the mod team, you're banned from Blox Cards. You can appeal in 6 months if you so desire.”
Note: Everyone gets a chance to submit an appeal. Some are very obviously doomed from the start, however.*

Later that night, his ban got brought into question. The response is as follows:

“Earlier today, Cactuar came to me asking why Flamez wasn't permanently banned. I told him this:
‘the reason it's 2 weeks is because his actions were far less severe than that of what Trips did, who did get perma'd for similar reasons mainly the fact Trips brought minors into the situation and disregarded the fact they were minor, even after being told directly by them’
He wished to argue Flamez should have been permanently banned, and then accused him of being a groomer.
After a lot of screenshots from him, the mods and I decided that claim was entirely untrue, and banned him as a result. False accusations like that aren't okay. I'm not entirely sure what his definition is, but from the screenshots I received, the timeline starts with him initiating ERP with Flamez, then Flamez gets comfortable enough to do light ERP with him over the next few days, to which Cac reciprocates. He seems completely fine with it, and even got into a voice call with eachother.
I'm assuming he's throwing around grooming because after the first time, Flamez is the main one starting light ERP with him, but cac is going along with it just fine, which makes perfect sense considering their first interaction on the 25th.”

The topic of whether Endless should remain banned or not does not happen, and will never happen. After this explanation of events leading to his ban, a group chat is formed with Leaficarus, Valentine, and a user currently known as frudichesque-like Misdemeanors#3519 (559622023035355136). In the context of any images shown, these two are the same person, who will be referred to as KJ.

Within this group chat, the argument that Flamez is a groomer is brought back, as KJ claims to have been groomed by him, or at least that there was an attempt to do so. This is their evidence to support that:

There was also an accusation that he was sending porn to KJ without verifying his age beforehand.
This second accusation is true, however said porn was solicited, and neither party is underage.

They both confirm their ages in the following screenshots, which reveals that they were already comfortable talking about similar topics in DMs.

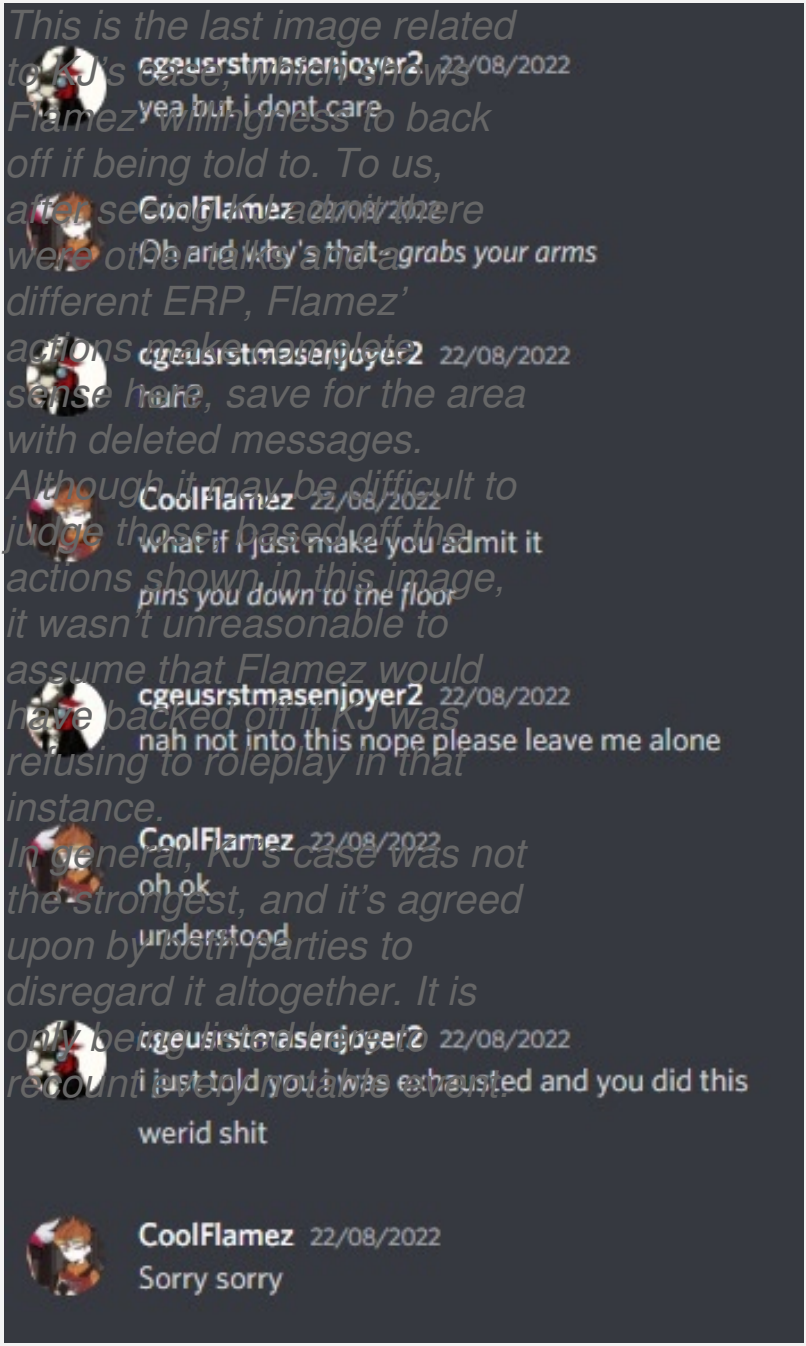
This is the last image related to KJ's case, which shows Flamez' willingness to back off if being told to. To us, after seeing KJ's admit there were other talks and a different ERP, Flamez' actions make complete sense here, save for the area with deleted messages. Although it may be difficult to judge those based off the actions shown in this image, it wasn't unreasonable to assume that Flamez would have backed off if KJ was refusing to roleplay in that instance.
In general, KJ's case was not the strongest, and it's agreed upon by both parties to disregard it altogether. It is only being listed here to recount every notable event.



This will once again bring us back to the case of Flamez and Endless, in which there are three videos sent to us which shows their entire relevant DMs, aside from a few things like personal information from Val or a literal dick pic. Due to the nature of Google Docs, videos are not allowed. Therefore, they will be in a folder accessible here . The videos will be referenced multiple times throughout the remainder of this document.

In the original discussion, it was argued that Flamez did not receive a harsh enough punishment due to “grooming” Endless, and taking advantage of his emotionally unstable mentality.

“This is the discussion I've had with Val addressing Flamez' ban, and whether or not it should be permanent. The main argument is that Flamez was grooming Endless, as he was in an emotionally unstable point of time when Flamez made advances on him.
This also ties in to the start of this DM history, with kjque stating Flamez was doing similar things to him, I'd like you all to read over that as well.
I've stated my opinion already, though they are subject to change. I'd like to ask that my words not influence your decision harder than the evidence presented to us, and above all else, keep this private.”

“Actually, small thing, I was also or at least initially arguing that Cactuar’s claims were not unfounded or unjustified and thus his punishment in that case was unfair. I do not think he was making a false accusation nor intentionally misleading the mods, as he had reasonable cause for his belief and he is not the only one who thinks so. Both me and Kjq also agree that Flamez behavior could be considered grooming.”

Immediately after this, multiple, though not all moderators, were dragged into the discussion. Overnight it was decided to permanently ban him due to the other moderators agreeing it was fair, without appeal, have Val archive the group chat, and leave it.

And that's exactly what happened.

The Unbanning

03-11-23

Flamez submits an appeal and wins. The initial "unappealable" verdict was revoked, because it was declared unfair to deny anyone the right to an appeal, making the process seem much more selective. The appeal in question wasn't very promising, although it required the prior evidence to be overlooked again. Fueled with much less emotion than the first time, it seems as if Flamez did make an active effort to encourage Endless to tell the truth about the situation. Endless actively lied to Val about the situation between the two and convinced Flamez to do the same. Endless was also the one initially requesting to keep things secret between them. It felt as if Flamez was only banned due to the emotional state everyone was in at the time of the ban.
After bringing the case up with the moderators, it was collectively agreed upon that he should be unbanned, aware of the risks that came with it, being him facing harassment over what happened. Flamez himself acknowledged this possibility and still wished to come back. The conditions were that he would come back under the role of Probation and was not allowed to obtain any role related to development. None of our moderators nor sources from other servers were able to provide a recent interaction with him implying he wouldn’t be safe to return, so he did.

Hours later, multiple moderators started being questioned about the decision, which caused for even further discussion.
This is the first.

Due to these responses, IcyTea offers to host a voice call between Val and Leaf, to decide if Flamez was indeed worthy of being unbanned.

03-13-23

I recorded this call. It lasted over 2 hours. Most of it is just rambling, honestly. I will not post it. The only relevant thing is that we had to argue over whether or not Flamez had malicious intent, which is a debate I lost. At the time, I was honestly rather indifferent about what happened. I did make an effort, but I simply wished to be done.*
After the lengthy call, it was decided Flamez would be permanently banned, again. The consensus was that Flamez had pushed for Endless to use real names in a video call, which proves the interaction to be romantically charged and goes against the boundaries Val had established to Endless. Said boundaries are to not be “romantically charged” in any ERP, although ERP itself is allowed. No other guidelines were provided.
Due to this, it could be argued that Flamez had malicious intent to damage the relationship Endless had with Val, despite already being in an open relationship himself.

From what we know, after hearing the news Val gives the exposé document she had prepared for the voice trial to Tom, and Tom decides to spread it around, causing a surge in blind harassment to members of the community. This is the part where we discuss that document.

This was an explanation provided as I was preparing to go to work. It wasn't going to be strong without enough time to properly develop the ideas I had to. Furthermore, this has been discussed multiple times with the moderators, and they agree that Flamez should stay unbanned, even stronger now than when he first came back. We didn't have reason to suspect he couldn't behave, as we didn't have any evidence suggesting he couldn't. Quite the opposite, actually, which is how he passed the appeal.
There is an argument that could be made that we wouldn't have evidence considering we're mods, though it's a poor stance as we have reports and images from other servers which accurately depict his behaviors to have changed, at least publicly. I'm sure considering everything that's happened, he wouldn't be doing this privately either, even if only in regards to Blox Cards. The amount of time he remains unbanned will serve as proof for his ability to change.

This.

I'm sorry, I don't know what exactly I "absolved." He fucked around and got banned, for six months.

I did not say he was Akai 2.0, merely that he was turning into him. Not quite there yet, therefore, Flamez is completely justified in saying that. Akai attempted to engage in sexual talks with a minor, and kept going despite the painfully blunt refusals in play. These two cases have their similarities, but they aren't the same person. Not even close. He was not as bad as Akai.

> The fact that he even thinks he can waltz back into

I'm not entirely sure what this means. He got unbanned and is trying to be a part of the community again, I'm not sure what you're expecting from him. He doesn't need to do anything else.

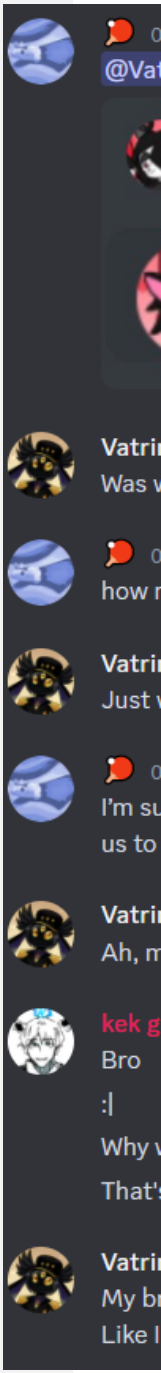
Cactuar got banned on the basis of misleading the mod team for accusing Flamez of being a groomer, which none of the mods were able to agree on. Everything Flamez did was consensual, everything Cactuar did was deliberate. He reciprocated everything.
Him losing mod due to being compromised isn't inherently wrong, but to suggest I viewed him in good standing beforehand is largely inaccurate.
It's worth noting that prior to being compromised, his Discord account was Vatrinity#8130, or Discord User 175860372459225088. This is one of the first things he had done which damaged his reputation with the moderators.



He was caught leaking what was supposed to be confidential mod application responses to a different server, Blox Cards Creative. This alone should have been worth stripping the role, but I didn’t. It’s an awful breach of privacy.

Up next, the Jecht situation. I don’t understand what the thought process is, to tell a clearly mentally distressed person to “shut the fuck up” and invalidate their problems. In no world would this have been alright.

He should've been gone long, long before he was. Him getting compromised was the nail in the coffin, especially after realizing he was warned by multiple people that what he was in the process of falling for was, in fact, going to compromise him.
Moving on.

Note how Flamez isn't exactly agreeing to it here. He's completely leaving the choice to Cactuar, until Cac specifically requests his opinion.

This, of course, ends in zero pushback from Endless. He just wanted to ERP.

Consider the fact he is 23 years old. Grooming isn't impossible if no minors are involved, but I'm willing to believe he knew what he was doing, considering the amount of lies involved.

You can exchange first names and video calls like this without being romantically involved. There's several online websites solely dedicated to group video masturbation or things similar. This isn't uncommon. Arguably, the DM history between them shows that exchanging first names gave them a master/servant character to roleplay as. You can see this as Endless decides to say "Master Carlo" as shown within the videos themselves. It's not provable that either of them were actually romantically attracted, especially when Flamez is already in his own open relationship, and has admitted to doing ERP like this a numerous amount of times.
The argument presented against this was "my silence does not mean consent" from Valentine, which is true.

However if it wasn't established what the limits were beforehand and the events that transpired can't be proven to have broken the already loose guidelines presented, we have no reason to consider what Flamez did as breaking a boundary, especially when both parties it pertains to fully consented to it regardless..
It's entirely possible Endless knew this was crossing the line, but again, Flamez did this kind of thing often (open relationship). I can't be convinced he was aware.

acted 5 days later. He thought you were aware, he did attempt to encourage Endless to speak up, he asked Endless if you were okay with what was going on, and at the time no one had reason to suspect he would lie about something like this, especially if it's an open relationship. You even stated this behavior was fine, your main issue is with Endless lying about it and the video call.

I was trying to get ready for work and did not feel like dealing with this. I said what I did in an attempt to get you to feign indifference. I made an effort to give you peace of mind, thinking you'd believe "Yeah, he'll just get banned again anyways. I don't need to try this hard." and I failed. Miserably.
I don't blame Flamez for the harassment everyone else has decided to enact in response to his return. Ironically, the document you released is a greater risk to the community than Flamez himself. I wouldn't have sided with the appeal if I didn't believe he would revert to his prior ways right after.

No one can pull them up because they don't exist. It's possible to systematically go through every single warn made by Unbelievaboat, look for any possible gaps, have those gaps be confirmed or denied via case number, and none of them will point towards CoolFlamez.
In fact, courtesy of gra → fyt, that's exactly what happened.
We didn't delete warnings, he was simply never warned.
The claim that we would delete those is slanderous.
He definitely should have been.

Releasing the CoolFlamez document and spreading it around has caused far more harm and discomfort than Flamez simply existing within the server. It weaponized members of the community against itself and forced a lot of unnecessary drama and harassment. Flamez didn’t do this. It’s a valid argument to say this document has posed a greater risk to the community than Flamez has, or will. Alienating members of the server and witch hunting people to the point where they no longer feel safe in the community, especially when they weren’t even the banned person in question, isn’t something to be tolerated.

I can’t blame Flamez for the actions everyone else has taken due to him.

Closing Statement

Flamez is not getting his appeal decision reversed. We have collectively agreed to not discuss this matter further. Attempting to exile Flamez from the community has brought nothing but unnecessary stress and pain to everyone involved, and to many people who should have remained uninvolved. Cases that may arrive in the future that are similar to this will not be handled as deeply as this, if at all , as it is not the responsibility of Blox Cards to meddle in personal affairs. Despite who agrees or disagrees with this verdict, it is the verdict, and will be upheld.
